

Steve Gumerungi Hodder belongs to the Lardil peoples of Mornington Island in the Gulf of Carpentaria, Queensland.

Steve has lived and worked in Mparntwe (Alice Springs) for over 20 years beginning his media training with the Central Australian Aboriginal Media Association (C.A.A.M.A.) in 1998 before going on to train with Kwementyeye (David) Vadiveloo as part of the Irrkerlantyeye Learning Centre's Media Unit.

Steve is currently senior news and current affairs presenter and journalist at CAAMA Radio which sees him gather and relay Indigenous specific news, current affairs and events from throughout the Northern Territory (Aust.), across Australia and around the world.

Steve is also a keen thespian, board member of Red Dust Theatre and a socio-political spoken word hip-hop performer dedicated to establishing educational platforms for Indigenous Australians without the need to sacrifice their Indigenous cultural integrity.
